Land Acknowledgment

We recognize the communities in which we work

At United Way BC, we dedicate ourselves to fostering understanding, respect, and an acknowledgment of the rich history of the lands and waterways we traverse. Our mission guides us across vast and diverse territories, each with its unique tapestry of languages, governance systems, traditions, and cultural heritage. The relationship with these lands and waterways has been stewarded by Indigenous communities since time immemorial, long before the establishment of contemporary boundaries, and we humbly recognize that many of these territories remain unceded.

We also acknowledge that our list of Nations is a work in progress, a testament to our ongoing process of improving our learning and understanding. Our commitment is to honor the cultural distinctiveness of each community as we continue to pursue improved and lasting partnerships built on the foundations of respect, humility, and open dialogue.

Message from the Board Chair

As I reflect upon my time on the United Way BC Board of Directors and my tenure as Chair, I'm filled with pride and gratitude. My journey with United Way began at a workplace campaign where I first witnessed the profound impact that this organization has on local communities, and it's led me to a front-row seat of an incredible organizational evolution.

When I originally joined the Board there were 12 United Ways across the province. The amalgamations in recent years have resulted in a bigger, better, stronger, and more agile organization. Generous support from donors and partners has enabled us to collaborate and co-create solutions to difficult issues in BC and beyond. Programs like Better at Home (funded by multi-year government grants) demonstrate our expertise in program execution and efficiency and speak to our ability to make a meaningful impact in the lives of those in need.

What began as a federated fundraiser and grantor is now a dynamic organization that directly delivers vital support where it's needed most: aiding local kids, youth, and seniors; offering emergency support; providing essential needs at Food Hubs; navigating community resources through 211 British Columbia and so much more.

United Way BC's greatest strengths lie in our ability to adapt and grow, and the ability to do so is a testament to our incredible staff, donors, and partners. While the threats of tariffs, inflation, and increasing cost of living is straining all British Columbians, there is also hope and support.

As a modern charity we're finding unique and transformative ways to help through innovative approaches. But most importantly, it's the tried-and-true ability to work with our crucial stakeholders – including you – to keep our communities safe, healthy, and connected that sets us apart.

No matter what the future brings, we will be here, united, and ready to step up when and where we're needed most. We'll remain steadfast in our commitment to making a positive, tangible impact. We'll continue to show that we can create meaningful change together. Thank you for your continued generosity and for being united with us for people in need.

Warm regards,

Robin Dhir
Chair, Board of Directors
United Way British Columbia

Message from the President & CEO

Last year I had the privilege of hosting United Ways from across North America. I was immensely proud to share the incredible work our team is doing in the communities we serve. We visited one of our local Regional Community Food Hubs where we met with staff and volunteers and created self-care kits for program participants. Witnessing United Way BC's innovative approach to food insecurity was humbling and rewarding - and just one of the many ways we're helping people in need across the province.

Looking back on the past year, I'm pleased to report that we're doing everything that we said we'd do to create healthy, caring, inclusive, and more resilient communities, which included welcoming United Way Southern Vancouver Island into the fold. This final regional amalgamation means that we have truly realized the vision of United Way British Columbia and we're excited to be working together to serve people in every corner of BC.

The United for Food Summit and our Emergency Response work were two additional achievements of significance. At the Food Summit, approximately 80 participants examined the challenges and inequities of BC's current food system in a true demonstration of how United Way BC uniquely addresses root issues within our communities by creating connection and cohesion. And when fires in Alberta destroyed a significant part of Jasper, our Emergency Response work was on full display. We jumped into action to partner with United Way of the Alberta Capital Region and local organizations in Kamloops to set up a welcome rest stop. Scared and weary travellers became our friends and neighbours, and we lived our values out loud in real time.

Additionally, thanks to increased government funding, we've expanded programs like Better at Home to locations like Haida Gwaii and Kimberley. We have also increased the reach of vital programs, including School's Out, FoodLink, and iVolunteer. I'm particularly proud of the work done to deepen our Indigenous partnerships, establish the Racist Incident Hotline, and our ongoing efforts in Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Belonging (DEIB).

As we continue to navigate these challenging economic and political times, our focus is on remaining relevant as we co-create solutions. We're also committed to making necessary budgetary adjustments to ensure our continued impact on local communities is prioritized, because our mission to help people in need on your behalf is unwavering. Guided by our strategic plan, we're dedicated to becoming a modern charity that lives its mission and brand promise every day; strengthening vital connections that support people in need in our local communities. Together, with your help, we're building a brighter, more resilient future for everyone.

Thank you for your generous and ongoing support,

Michael McKnight,
President & CEO
United Way British Columbia

HI NEIGHBOUR

Over the past seven years, the United Way BC Hi Neighbour initiative has successfully fostered community connections in over 33 communities, including Emergency Response and Indigenous Communities, across BC. Since 2021, nearly 1,000 Local Love grants have funded numerous projects, events, and other vital community-building activities. The Burnaby Edmonds Hi Neighbour initiative is a great example of this initiative in action. Among other things, the micro-grants in this neighbourhood funded 20 Master Classes, including cooking, English, and cultural workshops. These activities brought together community members from diverse backgrounds, creating stronger connections in this multi-ethnic neighbourhood. Community Builder Mary and 80 community champions played pivotal roles in transforming this community into a vibrant, thriving neighbourhood. In all, almost 165,000 people have been touched by our Hi Neighbour initiatives in communities throughout the Lower Mainland and in BC.

iVOLUNTEER

United Way BC's iVolunteer program connects individuals with volunteer opportunities that match their skills and interests, fostering a stronger community. From aiding vulnerable populations to enhancing local services, training and workshops are provided to both partner organizations and volunteers to develop, support, and address a variety of community needs. With 440 partner organizations and over 15,300 volunteers registered on iVolunteer.ca, the program engaged over 1,800 volunteer commitments to meet community needs at 151 partner organizations last year alone. Additionally, over 400 partner organization staff attended nine training sessions to strengthen their volunteer programs.

"I volunteer because I have a strong passion for helping others, and I believe that by volunteering, I can make a positive impact on my community while also gaining valuable experience and skills along the way."

– Gina, Volunteer, Prince George

Both Hi Neighbour and iVolunteer harness the strengths of the community by providing tools and resources to identify gaps and support mobilization. They inspire local action by empowering individuals to take part in creating a better community for all.

We step in where gaps exist

We step in where gaps exist to implement programs, provide funding efficiency, guidance, advocacy, and research to support local social service agencies and transition away when they are self-sustaining or the need has been met.

As the cost of living continues to rise, so does the number of people struggling to meet their basic needs. United Way BC's Food Security programs are essential in addressing food insecurity and supporting community partners and people in need, while Period Promise makes menstrual products more accessible.

REGIONAL COMMUNITY FOOD HUBS

Growing into new communities that are eager to collaborate and support equitable food access in their region, United Way BC Regional Community Food Hubs expanded to Prince George, Coquitlam, Central Vancouver, Lower Sunshine Coast, Kelowna, and Columbia-Shuswap last year; bringing the total number of Hubs across the province to 26. Our Food Hubs create positive, lasting change by meeting immediate needs, improving programs and services, and building healthy, caring communities that prioritize local food sovereignty.

FOOD LINK

United Way BC's Food Link initiative connects 174 community service agencies with those in need of food and other necessities. Last year we managed the distribution of over 60,000 pounds of food to local non-profits. Recognizing that some of our community partners were struggling to deliver food and other essential goods to their clients, while also facing barriers in collection, our Food Link team partnered with DoorDash to provide over 1,000 last-mile deliveries completely free of charge, setting a whole new standard for innovative partnerships.

PERIOD PROMISE

Lack of access to menstrual products affects many in BC. 1 in 4 have to choose essentials like food over period products. United Way BC collaborates with sponsors, businesses, unions, and community champions to collect and redistribute thousands of menstrual products annually. In the last 7 years, our Period Promise campaign delivered more than 3 million products to community partners and people in need. Help us eradicate period poverty by joining our Period Promise Policy Agreement and providing free menstrual products in your organization's washrooms.

"One advantage to being rural and remote is that everyone has everyone's back. There is such a strong sense of self-reliance – rural and remote communities must have resiliency and self-preservation to survive. It's about sharing what you grow. With United Way BC funding, our food programming is much better organized. The quality of food has gone up. United Way BC has also increased collaboration across the region as part of the Food Hub network."

– Mount Waddington Regional Community Food Hub

We collaborate to co-create solutions

We collaborate to co-create solutions with local social service agencies, government, unions, universities, advocacy groups, corporate partners, and donors.

EMERGENCY RESPONSE

United Way BC's Emergency Response efforts are a great example of how we work closely with a variety of partners to help people and communities in need. In 2024-25, we collaborated with community stakeholders in 31 communities, including 19 Indigenous communities, to coordinate emergency response and support recovery and resilience building. Partnering with Interior Health, Simon Fraser University, and the City of West Kelowna, we provided DIY air cleaner workshops to those most at risk from wildfire smoke, including seniors, pregnant women, and families with young children. When wildfires began impacting thousands in May, we partnered with United Way of the Alberta Capital Region and local organizations in Kamloops to set up a rest stop for 300 hungry and weary evacuees from Alberta. We were also on the ground to distribute gift cards to evacuees in Ashcroft and Cache Creek and provided essential support through partnerships with local agencies for friends and neighbours in a time of crisis. These efforts underscore the importance of working together to meet urgent community needs.

INDIGENOUS PRIORITIES

Our Indigenous Priorities team at United Way BC works closely with Indigenous groups and other partners to co-create solutions that address community needs while promoting cultural sovereignty. Thanks to a $1 million investment through United Way BC's Large Food Infrastructure Grant funded by the Government of British Columbia through the Ministry of Social Development and Poverty Reduction, Skeena Valley Indigenous communities will soon benefit from expanded food skills training and infrastructure to combat food insecurity. The Indigenous Food Sovereignty Association (Tea Creek) will develop a 4,000-square-foot Food Hub and Training Centre which will focus on food skills training, cultural food preservation, and supporting Indigenous food businesses. The new Longhouse will serve as a regional hub for food coordination, community connection, and emergency preparedness, thereby addressing a number of local needs.

Both our Emergency Response and Indigenous Priorities efforts exemplify how we convene partners to collaborate and co-create solutions for the issues that impact people and communities throughout the province.

We inspire and mentor leadership

We inspire and mentor leadership to promote and deepen connections across organizations, communities, and individuals.

Collaboration is vital to how United Way BC fosters leadership and drives sustainable systemic change. Here are just a few examples of how we brought BC changemakers together to tackle complex issues last year:

2024 UNITED FOR FOOD SUMMIT

Last May, our Food Security team brought together over 80 participants for a day and a half of learning, relationship building, and collaboration supporting community-centered action to address complex food systems challenges. Together we celebrated successes, explored challenges in food access, and learned how to support positive social change in the food security space in BC through a better understanding of public policy.

2024 PROVINCIAL SUMMIT ON HEALTHY AGING

Held in November, this biannual event brought together over 450 participants to help shape the future of aging in BC. A vibrant space for connection, United Way BC is proud to strengthen the community-based senior-serving sector through collaboration, co-creation, and knowledge-sharing.

"I'm looking forward to using some of the new tools that other organizations use. It was also a relief to see that some of the challenges we face are shared by others, no matter where they are."

— Summit Attendee

SCHOOL'S OUT COMMUNITY OF PRACTICE

Collaboration isn't just about proving impact — it's also about improving practice. United Way BC ensures that School's Out program staff receive training to better prepare them to engage with children. This year, sessions focused on how to engage neurodiverse children, support physical literacy for newcomers and Indigenous learners, and on learning about trauma-informed practices from clinical counsellors for violence prevention.

UNITED WAY BC PUBLIC POLICY INSTITUTE

United Way BC's Public Policy Institute empowers non-profit leaders to champion social change through a transformative six-month program. It equips them with skills to navigate complex policy landscapes in healthcare, the environment, housing, and safety. Participants engage in small group training, case studies, and hands-on projects, fostering a new generation of advocates. This commitment to leadership development aims to influence public policy and improve the lives of vulnerable British Columbians, paving the way for a brighter, equitable future.

We bring our unique strengths and expertise as a fund and program manager

We bring our unique strengths and expertise as a fund and program manager and administrator of provincial programs to manage and support critical programs that build life-changing connections.

HEALTHY AGING

United Way BC Healthy Aging administers grants and manages provincial programs to enhance seniors' quality of life, helping them stay active, independent, and engaged. Funded largely by the Government of BC, initiatives like Better at Home, Family & Friend Caregiver Supports, Social Prescribing, and Therapeutic Activation Programs for Seniors (TAPS) bring together government agencies, healthcare providers, and community organizations to create a comprehensive support network to provide a wide range of services and support to older adults.

One powerful example of this work in action is the Aging in Motion: Transportation Supports & Innovations grant which helps fill critical transportation gaps. Pat Zammit, 83, of White Rock, BC, has faced cancer three times and knows how hard it can be to get to treatment. A grant to the Volunteer Cancers Drivers Society allowed them to expand their free rides to patients in Greater Vancouver and the Fraser Valley. "Amazing. Absolutely amazing," says Pat, who the service has taken to Surrey Memorial Hospital 48 times. "Many times, friends offered to take me, but you can't always be beholden to friends," Pat shares. "It's lovely to have something that's independent...and they're so obliging."

HELPLINE SERVICES

In 2024-25, 211 British Columbia answered over 51,700 calls, made close to 129,000 referrals, and accommodated over 130,000 website database searches for available community supports. Through the wealth of data collected through 211 British Columbia, part of United Way BC Helpline Services, we can see where gaps exist in our communities and move to fill them by providing support where it is needed most. Thanks to years of experience in managing provincial helpline services like 211 British Columbia, the Government of BC partnered with us in May 2024 to launch a new Racist Incident Helpline. 1-833-457-5463 (HLP-LINE) provides trauma-informed support people who have experienced or witnessed an act of racism in BC.

"It brings me great relief to know that someone is there to listen and provide guidance because my worries have been keeping me up at night. Thank you so much for listening. I truly appreciate it."

– Caller

By bringing our expertise in fund and program management, we ensure that programs like these are effective, sustainable, and impactful, while building life-changing connections and creating more caring and inclusive communities that are safe and welcoming for all.

We bring transformative long-term donor relationships

We build transformative long-term donor relationships. We are committed to the responsible use of donor contributions, helping to build a culture of philanthropy within donor organizations, and to simple, innovative, and cost-efficient ways to give and participate.

A great example of how we work closely with our partners over the years is Teck Highland Valley Copper and their union, the United Steelworkers Local 7619.

For 37 years, Teck Highland Valley Copper and members of the United Steelworkers Local 7619 have generously supported their communities through an annual United Way BC Workplace Campaign. What started as a simple conversation about engaging people with a cup of coffee evolved into a movement with a powerful ripple effect across the region. Their combined efforts in employee giving, special events, and corporate gifts have surpassed $10 million in donations, making a significant impact in local communities throughout the Thompson Nicola Cariboo region.

Thanks to the generosity of partners like Teck Highland Valley Copper and the United Steelworkers Local 7619, United Way BC has been able to scale impactful programs such as Hi Neighbour in Kamloops and Schools Out in Merritt and Ashcroft, along with other important initiatives throughout the region.

We've also been able to leverage the donations we receive and keep our fundraising costs down through our Campaign Associate program. Local employees and union members are loaned to United Way BC for up to a 16-week term to help during our Fall Campaign season, ensuring that even more of every dollar raised can be invested back into community.

It's by nurturing long term relationships with partners like Teck Highland Valley Copper that United Way BC can build a culture of philanthropy and create lasting, positive change in our communities. We certainly couldn't do it without the support of people and organizations just like you.

We connect our rigorous evidence-based approach with community listening and consultation

We connect our rigorous evidence-based approach with community listening and consultation to ensure we prioritize and allocate resources towards where we can make the greatest impact. We evaluate the impact of our work and ensure programs have measurable outcomes.

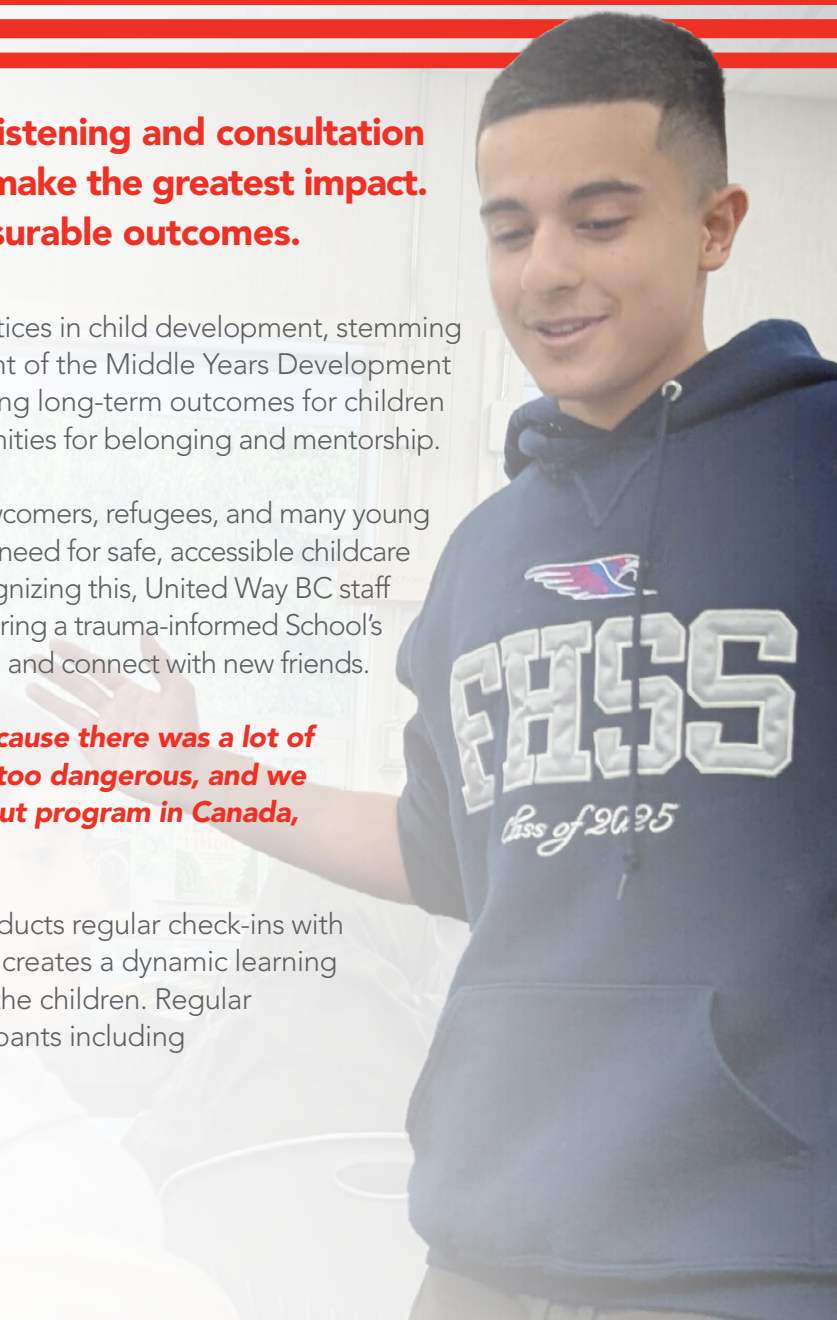

United Way BC School's Out programs are built on research, community need, and best practices in child development, stemming from a collaboration with UBC Human Early Learning Partnership (HELP) and the development of the Middle Years Development Instrument. Our 108 program sites (including three new sites in Northern BC) focus on improving long-term outcomes for children facing barriers while offering academic support, social-emotional learning, and provide opportunities for belonging and mentorship.

The Fleetwood neighbourhood in northern Surrey, British Columbia is a welcoming home for newcomers, refugees, and many young families, but the recent population boom is straining local schools. There is a strong and growing need for safe, accessible childcare spaces that support structure, learning, and healthy development outside of school hours. Recognizing this, United Way BC staff engaged the Surrey School District and local non-profit, Feels Like Home Newcomers Society, to bring a trauma-informed School's Out program to Woodland Park Elementary, creating a space where newcomer children can learn and connect with new friends.

"I'm 11 years old and my family and I came to Canada from Afghanistan in May 2024 because there was a lot of fighting and it wasn't safe. My brother Ojed and I couldn't go to school because it was too dangerous, and we were scared every day...We weren't able to have fun. Now that we're in the School's Out program in Canada, we get to be kids again." – Maryiam

Every School's Out program site collects surveys from the children to measure impact and conducts regular check-ins with school district partners to understand what's working and where adaptations are needed. This creates a dynamic learning environment and ensures that program staff can be as responsive as possible to the needs of the children. Regular monitoring across all program sites shows considerable improvements in outcomes for participants including connectedness, health and wellness, and social and emotional development.

MANY WAYS TO CONTRIBUTE

Fern, a mother of five in North Shuswap, leveraged United Way BC support during one of the most challenging times for her family.

“I could see the fire from my house. The smoke was terrible, and everything was covered in ash,” Fern recalls.

Passionate about growing food and helping others, Fern quickly got involved in helping her community through the Eagle Valley Community Support Society. United Way BC’s Wildfire Recovery Fund helped organizations like Eagle Valley set up emergency food access.

“When people come together and donate, it makes it possible to survive. I hope that everyone in my community can have their needs met... Thanks to United Way BC Wildfire Recovery Fund, there’s hope for that.”

EVERY DOLLAR HELPS

Deborah uses United Way BC funds to bolster food security at St. John Gualbert Church in Port McNeill.

“We’re so grateful for the funding,” Deborah says. “We’re able to support the free meal program at the Church and build community garden boxes. The food we grow is used in the program and in the Loaves & Fishes’ food market.”

As a Director on the Board, Deborah oversees many programs at the church, including a secondhand bookstore, the community garden, seniors exercise programs, music programs, Pilates classes, and even a kids’ Snap Dragon program.

Our collective impact

Thanks to the generous support of our donors and partners, we can collaborate and co-create local solutions to local issues, step in where gaps exist, and help neighbours in need throughout British Columbia. United, we truly are stronger.

OVER 65,000 SENIORS

received more than 800,000 Healthy Aging supports and services to stay independent, active, and engaged in their own communities.

OVER 6,000 CHILDREN received the support they needed to succeed and thrive at 108 United Way BC School's Out and School's Out Summer program sites.

4.6 MILLION MEALS AND HAMPERS

were delivered to over 314,000 individuals and families in need through dignified food access programming to help address Food Security.

ALMOST 9,000 PEOPLE in 31 communities received emergency assistance and support in post emergency recovery and resilience building.

MORE THAN 51,700 PEOPLE were supported by Community Navigators at 211 British Columbia, who provided close to 129,000 referrals to local programs and services to help with life's basic needs.

580 FORMER YOUTH IN CARE

were able to cover basic living expenses while pursuing post-secondary education in BC through the Youth Futures Education Fund.

15,300 VOLUNTEERS

can connect with 440 community partners on United Way BC's iVolunteer platform to find meaningful engagement opportunities.

ABOUT 20,000 NEIGHBOURS

were engaged and almost 300 Local Love funds were distributed in 12 United Way BC Hi Neighbour communities.

Moving forward, united

As a fully integrated provincial entity, United Way BC now works more efficiently across the province. Our commitment to continuing our core programs and identifying gaps remains steadfast. Here are some of the projects and initiatives we're looking forward to over the next year:

FOOD SECURITY

In 2023, United Way BC received a significant grant from the Government of British Columbia to strengthen food security and access. A $6 million Large Food Infrastructure Grant allocated $1 million to each of six communities: Armstrong, Chilliwack, Cranbrook, Kitwanga, Port Hardy, and Vancouver. These funds support regional food hubs, commercial kitchens, food storage facilities, and expanded meal production services in high-need areas, with projects launching currently and completion set for March 2026.

KIDS & YOUTH

Strengthening the child and youth sector through listening and responsiveness to local priorities in community remains a key focus. Youth formerly in government care will continue to receive critical support through the Youth Futures Education Fund as they pursue post-secondary studies and work toward the future they deserve. Our School's Out program will expand into more high-need communities based on gap analyses and consultations, particularly in Southern Vancouver Island. Our Future Leaders program will incorporate youth input to enhance career opportunities, skill-building, and employment readiness.

HEALTHY AGING

With a generous 5-year grant from the BC Ministry of Health, our Healthy Aging initiatives will expand to better support the aging population throughout the province including: more support for older adults to stay in their homes, greater stability for our senior-serving partner agencies, and more investment in inclusive, age-friendly communities. More details will be announced soon.

WORK EXPERIENCE OPPORTUNITIES

New in 2025, the United Way BC Work Experience Opportunities Grant, funded by the Government of Canada and the Province of British Columbia, will provide individuals on income or disability assistance with essential skills and hands-on work experience. This initiative aims to prepare participants for in-demand jobs and contribute to economic recovery.

UNITED WAY BC DAY

On September 18, 2025, we will celebrate our annual Fall Campaign Kick-off at our first United Way BC Day as a united entity across the province. The day will include Campaign Kick-off Breakfasts in Kamloops, Kelowna, Nanaimo, Prince George, and Victoria, and feature light-ups and proclamations to celebrate our work and the support of our partners and donors across the province. Learn more about how you can get involved at United Way BC Day: September 18, 2025 - United Way British Columbia.

2024-25 Board of Directors

We extend our heartfelt gratitude to our Board of Directors, a group of committed leaders who generously volunteer their time and expertise to guide United Way BC. Their blend of knowledge, insight, and passion helps us forge vital connections across communities, support those in need, and inspire meaningful action.
